

MARKET WEEK: JULY 2, 2018

The Markets (as of market close June 29, 2018)

The benchmark indexes listed here continued to trend downward, losing value for the second week in a row. The Russell 2000 and the Nasdaq, both of which had been the leading performers for much of the year, suffered the biggest weekly losses, followed by the S&P 500, the Dow, and the Global Dow. While energy shares performed well on the heels of oil prices reaching a four-year high, overall fears of worsening trade relations between the United States and several of its trade partners pulled investors away from stocks.

The price of crude oil (WTI) surged last week, closing at $74.25 per barrel, up from the prior week's closing price of $69.32 per barrel. The price of gold (COMEX) fell to $1,254.20 by early Friday evening, down from the prior week's price of $1,271.70. The national average retail regular gasoline price fell to $2.833 per gallon on June 25, 2018, $0.046 lower than the prior week's price but $0.545 higher than a year ago.

Last Week's Economic Headlines

- The third and final estimate of the first-quarter gross domestic product showed the economy expanded at a rate of 2.0%. Fourth-quarter growth was 2.9%. Gross domestic income (the net sum of income earned in the production of GDP) increased 3.6% in the first quarter, compared with a 1.0% bump in the fourth quarter. In the first quarter, consumer spending grew at the relatively low rate of 0.9%, while business spending rose 7.5%.
- Both pre-tax and after-tax consumer income increased by 0.4% in May. Overall, consumer spending climbed 0.2% in the month, while core expenditures (excluding food and energy) also accelerated at 0.2%. Prices for consumer goods and services, overall and excluding food and energy, also increased 0.2%. Of note, consumer prices are up 2.3%, and core prices, an inflation indicator of importance to the Federal Open Market Committee, is up 2.0% over the past 12 months — right at the target inflation rate set by the Committee. Look for more interest rate increases intended to keep the reins on inflation.
- New home sales soared in May, up 6.7% over April's figures and 14.1% ahead of the May 2017 estimate. Weakening sales prices may have helped boost sales in May. The median sales price of new houses sold in May 2018 was $313,000 ($318,500 in April). The average sales price was $368,500 ($394,600 in April). The seasonally adjusted estimate of new houses for sale at the end of May was 299,000. This represents a supply of 5.2 months at the current sales rate.
- New orders for durable goods fell 0.6% in May following a 1.0% drop in April. Excluding transportation, new orders decreased 0.3%. Shipments were down 0.1% after increasing nine consecutive months. Unfilled orders rose 0.5% in May after advancing 0.6% in April. Lastly, inventories increased 0.3% — the same increase as in April.
- Despite tariffs and trade wars, exports surged 2.1% in May, pulling down the trade deficit from $67.3 billion in April to $64.8 billion in May. Imports of goods for May were $208.4 billion, $0.4 billion (or 0.2%) more than April imports.
- In the week ended June 23, there were 227,000 initial claims for unemployment insurance, an increase of 9,000 from the previous week's level. The advance insured unemployment rate remained at 1.2%. The advance number of those receiving unemployment insurance benefits during the week ended June 16 was 1,705,000, a decrease of 21,000 from the prior week's level, which was revised up by 3,000.

Eye on the Week Ahead

Trading is usually subdued during the holiday-shortened week. Nevertheless, the following week could start off with a bang based on Friday's employment data for June.
