

MARKET WEEK: SEPTEMBER 15, 2025

The Markets (as of market close September 12, 2025)

Wall Street enjoyed a positive performance last week, fueled by growing expectations of a Federal Reserve interest rate cut. Each of the benchmark indexes listed here finished the week with gains. The NASDAQ recorded a fresh record high as tech shares continued to lead the market. Investors apparently saw the economy slowing just enough to warrant an interest rate cut but not so much as to trigger a recession. Ten-year Treasury bond yields rose last Friday, recovering some of the sharp losses from earlier in the week. The recent decline in yields, in anticipation of the aforementioned rate cut, has been a positive for the housing sector (with mortgage rates declining) and for stocks. Crude oil prices ticked higher as Ukrainian drone strikes raised concerns over potential disruptions to Russian oil exports.

Last Week's Economic News

- The Consumer Price Index (CPI) increased 0.4% in August after rising 0.2% in July. For the 12 months ended in August, the CPI increased 2.9% after rising 2.7% over the 12 months ended in July. The index for shelter rose 0.4% in August and was the largest factor in the overall monthly increase. Food prices increased 0.5% over the month as food at home prices rose 0.6%, while prices for food away from home increased 0.3%. Prices for energy rose 0.7% in August as gasoline prices increased 1.9% over the month. Prices less food and energy (core prices) rose 0.3% in August, the same increase as in July.
- Producer prices edged down 0.1% in August after increasing 0.7% the previous month. Over the last 12 months, producer prices have risen 2.6%. The August decrease in producer prices was attributable to a 0.2% decline in prices for services. In contrast, prices for goods inched up 0.1%. Prices less foods, energy, and trade services rose 0.3% in August, marking the fourth consecutive monthly increase. For the 12 months ended in August, prices less foods, energy, and trade services moved up 2.8%, the largest 12-month advance since climbing 3.5% in March 2025.
- The monthly Treasury budget showed a deficit of $345 billion in August, well above the July deficit of $291 billion. Outlays for military active duty and retirement, veterans' benefits, Supplemental Security Income, and Medicare payments to health maintenance organizations and prescription drug plans accelerated into August because September 1, 2025, the normal payment date, fell on a nonbusiness day. For the 11 months of the current fiscal year, the deficit sits at $1,973 billion, which is higher than the deficit of $1,897 billion over the comparable period last fiscal year.

- The national average retail price for regular gasoline was $3.192 per gallon on September 8, $0.015 per gallon above the prior week's price but $0.044 per gallon less than a year ago.
